MANUAL

OF THE

Broadway Tabernacle Church.

The Broadway Tabernacle Church was organized in July, 1840, by the union of sixty-seven persons in a covenant for that purpose. Its public recognition by an ecclesiastical council took place on the 3d of September in the same year. The sermon was preached by Rev. Leonard Bacon, D. D., of New Haven, Conn., the charge given by Rev. John Todd, D. D., then of Philadelphia, and the right hand of fellowship by Rev. William Patton, D. D., of New York.

In October following an Ecclesiastical Society was incorporated, pursuant to statute, under the name of the "Broadway Tabernacle Society."

The Rev. E. W. Andrews, of West Hartford, Conn., having accepted the call of the Church and Society, was publicly installed on Sabbath evening, January 31st, 1841. Rev. W. W. Andrews, then of Kent, preached the installation sermon; Rev. Mark Tucker, D. D., of Providence, gave the charge to the pastor;

Rev. E. L. Cleveland, D. D., of New Haven, gave the charge to the people; and Rev. S. W. S. Dutton, D. D., of New Haven, gave the right hand of fellowship.

In the summer of 1844 Mr. Andrews resigned his pastoral charge, and he was dismissed by a mutual Council on the 14th of August.

In March, 1845, the Church and Society presented a unanimous call to the Rev. Joseph P. Thompson, then of New Haven, Conn., to become their pastor. He was installed on the 15th of the following April. Rev. Leonard Bacon, D. D., preached the sermon; Rev. Samuel Merwin offered the installing prayer; Rev. A. C. Baldwin gave the charge to the pastor; Rev. S. W. S. Dutton, D. D., gave the right hand of fellowship; and Rev. Edwin Holt addressed the people.

For twelve years after the settlement of Dr. Thompson the Church continued to worship in the "Broadway Tabernacle," from which it derived its name. This building, situated on the east side of Broadway, between Leonard and Worth streets, was erected in 1836.* In 1840 the house was purchased by Mr. David Hale, under foreclosure, and was by him leased to the Congregational Society formed in connection with the Broadway Tabernacle Church. At the settlement of Dr. Thompson, in 1845, the Tabernacle Society purchased the property, Mr. Hale encouraging the movement by a liberal subscription.

So long as the location continued to be central to

* The religious society which first occupied this building was Congregational in its organization; but in 1838 "The Free Church," which had for some time worshipped at the corner of Washington and Dey streets, united with it, and it became Presbyterian.

the population of the city, the vast edifice was ordinarily filled, and often thronged, upon the Sabbath by a congregation composed largely of strangers, young men, and persons who, having no stated place of worship, sought occasionally the privileges of the Gospel in the ample free galleries of the Tabernacle. The great Head of the Church manifestly smiled upon the enterprise, and made it an instrument for his glory in the salvation of many souls. Since the organization of the Tabernacle Church, several Congregational Churches have been formed in New York, Brooklyn, and vicinity, and the principles of the Congregational faith and order have been widely diffused beyond the pale of New England. In several instances the organization of new Churches may be distinctly traced to the example and influence of the Tabernacle as the mother Church. This Church has itself been blessed with many seasons of special mercy, and during the first twenty-five years of its existence there were added to it by profession 450, by letter 1,060.

In June, 1855, the Broadway Tabernacle Society, after mature deliberation, unanimously voted to authorize their Board of Trustees to sell the Tabernacle, and seek a location for the Church in the midst of the resident population of the city. The encroachments of business compelling families to remove up town, made it well nigh impossible longer to sustain the Church in its original home. In 1857 the Tabernacle was sold, and the last religious service was held within its walls on the 26th of April in that year.

A site was selected for the new Tabernacle at the intersection of Broadway, Sixth avenue, and Thirty-fourth street, nearly three miles north of the old location, and the building was completed in April, 1859. During the interval the Church worshipped in the City Assembly Rooms, the chapel of the "Home for the Friendless," and the chapel of the new building on Thirty-fourth street.

The Tabernacle faces the Sixth avenue, which Broadway here crosses diagonally. It is built upon a lot which measures 100 feet on the avenue by 150 feet on Thirty-fourth street; and the building is 89 feet 8 inches front, and 150 deep, including the chapel in the rear, which is under the same roof. The main audience-room is 76 feet wide by 90 feet in depth in the clear, exclusive of the recess for the pulpit; the entire length from the pulpit-screen to the front wall is 118 feet.

In the ground plan of the interior the building presents a parallelogram; but the roof is cruciform, and the elevation of the transepts gives a pleasing variety to the exterior walls and buttresses. On the corner of Thirty-fourth street and the avenue is a massive and finely-proportioned tower, 135 feet in height. The side view presents three tiers of windows; the lower tier lighting the aisles, the second the galleries, and the third forming the clear story of the nave. The several heights of the building outside are 32 feet to the top of the aisle walls, 64 feet to the top of the nave—the clear story rising 32 feet above the aisles—and 88 feet to the ridge of the roof. The transept walls are carried up to a line with the ridge; these have a lower tier of three windows, and a great triple window above. Directly in the rear of the transept wall, the wall of the chapel rises to the same elevation with that of the aisles, and above this again, is seen the clear story, which here forms an apsis, in the rear of the pulpit, over the chapel—thus presenting in the interior of the church, an arched ceiling 150 feet long, at an elevation of nearly 70 feet from the floor.

The style of the building is perpendicular Gothic, carried out with a chaste and almost severe simplicity, which imparts an air of grandeur and beauty to the whole structure. The interior effect is rich and imposing.

The windows are of colored glass, so happily toned as to subdue the light without making it sombre, and are free alike from grotesque figures and gaudy colors. The walls are colored uniformly in drab. The pews are of oak, without doors, and are finished with crimson upholstery; and the pulpit, the organ case, and the galleries correspond with the oaken pews. There are 312 pews in the house, 212 on the ground floor. These are arranged in three double-blocks, with an extra tier of wall pews upon either side; that is, there are eight rows of pews the entire length of the building, divided by four aisles. The front gallery extends back over the vestibule, to the front wall of the building, and contains some of the most eligible pews in the house. Each gallery contains five rows of pews through its entire length. Counting only the sittings unobstructed by the pillars, the house will seat comfortably about 1,600 persons.

Back of the pulpit, upon either side, is a gallery for the choir, the manuals of the organ being upon the same floor. The great organ, with the "swell" and "pedal," occupies the space in the apsis over the chapel, and the choir organ is directly over the pu pit, at a lower level.

The following Scheme of the Organ exhibits it

The Tabernacle is built of Little Falls (Jersey) rubble; the dimension-stone and the porches throughout are of cream-colored New-Brunswick stone. The front porch, of this stone, is a beautiful specimen of carved Gothic. The outer doors are of solid oak. There are ample facilities for ingress and egress.

The chapel, directly in the rear of the main audience-room, is 28 feet by 85 in the clear, and will seat nearly 500 persons. This is used as the principal Sabbath-School room, the seats being fitted with reversible backs. Under this is a finished basement-room, with a good entrance from Thirty-fourth street; and over it a fine suite of rooms for Bible classes, and parlors for social gatherings.

On the north side of the main building, at the angle formed with it by the rear wall of the chapel, is a neat two-story edifice for the accommodation of the pastor. On the first floor is a reception-room, which communicates with the chapel, and with the pulpit of the church. In the second-story is the study, well-lighted and ventilated, with ample book-shelves and closets; and adjoining this, occupying the recess between the Church and the Chapel, is an additional library, of two stories, with book-cases, drawers, and galleries for maps. All these apartments are for the pastor's private use.

The new Tabernacle was dedicated to the worship of Almighty God, on Sabbath, April 24th, 1859. Devotional Services were conducted by Rev. Milton Badger, D. D., Secretary of the American Home Missionary Society, and the sermon was preached by Rev. Edwards A. Park, D.D., Professor in Andover Theological Seminary, from 1. Cor. ii : 2. The pastor of the Church offered the prayer of dedication, prefacing it with the following declaration:

"It does not accord with our views of worship under the Christian dispensation, nor with the usages of our body, to attach sanctity to a material structure. But it does accord with the inmost sense of propriety and with the devout sentiment of Christian gratitude, and it has also the warrant of Scripture, that we should set apart with due solemnity the place in which we and our children shall worship God, and should hallow it in our thoughts and associations. Now, therefore, O ye people, blessed of the Lord, I would call upon you to arise, and join with me in offering this new temple to the service of the Triune God—the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost.

"We bring to God, with reverence and gratitude, this house of prayer and praise, beseeching him to hallow it with his presence in our assemblies and his blessing upon our worship. We dedicate these walls to the use of a church of Christ. We dedicate these seats for the solemn and joyful convocations of God's people, in the reverent worship of his Name, and the devout hearing of his Word. We dedicate this choir to the service of song in the house of the Lord. We dedicate this pulpit to the preaching of Christ and him crucified; and this table of communion to that high and sacred service whereby we do show forth the Lord's death till he come. May he whose glory fills the heavens condescend to meet his people in this house! May Christ here build into his temple new and living stones! May the Holy Spirit here bless the Word unto sanctification and eternal life! May our children and our children's children here worship in the beauty of holiness, when we shall slumber in the dust! And when our earthly house of this Tabernacle shall be dissolved, may we enter upon a purer, nobler worship in that city where the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it! And to the King Eternal, Immortal, Invisible, the only wise God, be glory in the church by Christ Jesus, throughout all ages, world without end, Amen!"

At the completion of the new Tabernacle there was a debt upon the building of sixty-five thousand dollars. The Society might have relieved itself of this encumbrance by the common expedient of selling pews; but it was resolved that there should be no private ownership in the building; and as the financial condition of the community was not then favorable for a subscription towards reducing the indebtedness, the Trustees decided to carry the debt until arrangements could be made for removing it. In the Spring of 1863, the congregation, having then largely increased, by a free-will offering paid off twenty-five thousand dollars of this indebtedness; and in 1864, by a renewed subscription, consummated on the second Sabbath in March, they raised the remaining sum of forty thousand dollars, and cancelled every claim upon the property. The Society now holds the land, the building, and all its furniture free of encumbrance, for the occupation and use of the Broadway Tabernacle Church.

CONGREGATIONALISM.

[The following statement of Congregational Principles and Usages published by the Congregational Board of Publication, will be of service to members of the Church, in respect to their personal privileges and duties].

I. Power of the Church.—It is a fundamental principle of Congregationalism that all ecclesiastical power resides in the associated body of the brethren, and not in the officers, nor in ecclesiastical bodies distinct from or above the particular or local Church. The principal powers pertaining to the Church may be classified as follows:—

1st. The power of electing its own officers.—The Bishops, or Pastors and Teachers, and the Deacons, are elected by a majority of the Church.

2d. The power of admitting or excluding its own members.—Persons are admitted to the Church by a vote of the brethren: unworthy members are excluded in the same manner.

3d. The power of forming its own creed.—Each Church frames its own Confession of Faith; yet it is worthy of notice, as showing the unity of the teaching of the Spirit, and the safety of trusting the local Churches, that although the Confessions framed by these Churches may be counted by hundreds, there is the most substantial harmony and even identity of doctrine among them, upon the essential truths of religion.

4th. The power of regulating the details of its own worship, and modes of procedure in exercising the previous powers.—The mode in which public worship shall be performed, the seasons for communion, the mode of receiving or disciplining its own members, special seasons for religious worship, are all regulated by vote of the Church.

5th. The power of independency.—That is, each Church has these powers in and of itself, which it may exercise without responsibility to any ecclesiastical authority above itself. Its votes on all these points are decisive and final. No ecclesiastical power can impose on any Church a religious teacher, or other officer; or admit or exclude members; or form its creed; or regulate its mode of proceeding. Each Church has the exclusive right of managing its own concerns.

II. Officers.—Congregational Churches have two permanent and regularly elected classes of officers. These are Bishops (usually styled Pastors), and Deacons.

In the early history of New England, it was common for each Church to enjoy the labors of two ministers (distinguished as Pastor and Teacher), and the primitive Churches appear to have had several, composing a Ministerial Elderhood, or Presbytery, in (not over) each local Church ; Acts 14 : 23 ; Titus 1 : 5 ; 1 Timothy 4 : 14 ; James 5 : 14.

The Deacons appointed by each Church may be as many as the Church, in its discretion, shall determine.

The primitive Churches, founded by the Apostles, had these officers, and no others. Those called "Elders" were the same as "Bishops." Compare Acts 20 : 17, 28 ; 1 Peter 5 : 1—5 ; Titus 1 : 5—7. See also Neander's Church History, vol. i., p. 184, and Mosheim's Ecc. History, vol. i., p. 69. Thus Paul, writing to the Philippians, directs his letters to "the saints at Philippi, with the Bishops and Deacons." Phil. 1 : 1. It is evident, therefore, that in the single Church in that city were at least two Bishops. In the Church at Ephesus, also, were several Bishops ; for Paul, having invited the Elders of the Church at Ephesus to meet him at Miletus, Acts 20 : 17, styles those very individuals, verse 28, Bishops. Our translators give the word "overseers ;" but the word in the original language is bishops, and is so rendered in every other text. As there were several of these in each of the primitive Churches, they divided the duties of the ministry among them according to their natural and spiritual gifts.

No text can be produced in which God assigns power over the Churches to any individual, or set of individuals. It is to be taken for granted, therefore, that no such power exists. The New Testament speaks of no organization above the local Church. It always uses the word "Church" to mean either the general company of the redeemed, or the congregation of professed believers in a particular place. The word never occurs in the sense of an external centralized organization, embracing and ruling a multitude of congregations; as when we hear men say, "The Presbyterian Church," or "The Episcopal Church." There is no such thing as "The Congregational Church of the United States," but "The Congregational Churches," &c. Thus we read of "The Churches of Judea," Gal. 1: 22, "The Churches of Macedonia," 2 Cor. 8: 1, and "The Churches of Asia, 1 Cor. 16: 19, "The Seven Churches" in Proconsular Asia, Rev. 1: 11, the Churches being separate and independent.

But there are various passages which fully indicate the possession of all the powers above named by the primitive Churches. The election of officers by the people was evidently a law of the Christian Church, from the time of its commencement. Even the designation of an apostle to fill a vacancy, Acts 1: 15—26, was made by the assembled brethren. The Church at Jerusalem chose the seven persons who were to exercise the office of deacon, Acts 6: 3, 5. In Matthew 18: 15—17, the Church, and that alone, is expressly charged with the duty of exercising discipline. The Church at Corinth were directed by Paul to exercise discipline, 1 Cor. 5: 1—7, 6: 1—5. The command to exercise discipline is repeated in 1 Cor. 5: 11—13. The Church of Corinth actually exercised this power, as may be seen by 2 Cor. 2: 6—10, where the censure is said to have been "inflicted of many." Ecclesiastical History, also, gives the same account of the primitive Churches. Mosheim (who was not a Congregationalist) says, Ecc. Hist., vol. i., p. 68.

"The assembled people, therefore, elected their own rulers and teachers, or by their free consent received such as were nominated to them. They also, by their suffrages, rejected or confirmed the laws that were proposed by their rulers in their assemblies; they excluded profligate and lapsed brethren, and restored them; they decided the controversies and disputes that arose; they heard and determined the causes of presbyters and deacons; in a word, the people did everything that is proper for those in whom the supreme power is vested."

Mosheim says again, Hist. Com., vol. i., p. 196:—

"Although all the Churches were, in this first age of Christianity, united together in one common bond of faith and love, and were in every respect ready to promote the interests and welfare of each other by a reciprocal interchange of good offices, yet, with regard to government and internal economy, every individual church considered itself as an independent community; none of them ever looking in these respects beyond the circle of its own members for assistance, or recognizing any sort of external influence or authority."

Congregationalism is true republicanism. Each Congregational Church and Society elects its own officers, owns its own house and property, judges of the qualifications of its own members, allows to each brother an equal vote, and has no superior, lord, or overseer.

It is worthy of remark, also, that the principles on which Congregational Churches are organized, being thus purely republican, are in entire harmony with the principles of our civil government, and had much to do with its origin.

III. Powers and Duties of Officers.—Congregational Churches intrust no ecclesiastical power to their officers. The New Testament denies to the officers authority of any original or exclusive character, and represents them rather as the servants of the Churches. Matt. 20: 25, 27.

The great duty of the primitive scriptural Bishop was to teach and to preside in the assembly of the Church. As the passages which relate to this subject are too numerous and too long to be quoted, let the reader refer to Acts 20: 28, 1 Tim. 3: 1—6; 5: 17; 4: 12—16; 2 Tim. 2: 1—27; 4: 1—5; Titus 1: 7, 9; 2: 1—15; 3: 1—11; Heb. 13: 7, 17; 1 Pet. 5: 1—3.

The duties of Deacons in Congregational Churches are to assist in distributing the elements of the Lord's Supper; to attend to the secular business of the Church; to visit the members for the purpose of religious instruction and prayer; and, in behalf of the Church, to minister to the wants of the poor.

Very little is said in the Scriptures respecting the office of Deacons. Their character, though not their duties, is described in 1 Tim. 3: 8—12. Neander says, in his Church history, vol. i., p. 188:—

"Besides these (the Bishops), we find only one other Church-office in the Apostolic age,—that of the deacons. The duties of this office were, from the beginning, simply external, as it was instituted in the first place, according to Acts vi., to assist in the distribution of alms. The care of providing for the poor and sick of the communities, to which many other external duties were afterwards added, devolved particularly on this office."

IV. Conditions of Admission to the Church.—It is the unanimous opinion of the Congregational Churches, that a credible profession of personal faith in Christ is the indispensable condition of communion and membership in the Church. It is by no means maintained, that entire assurance of salvation should be required, or perfect agreement in the details of doctrine; but as the Church was designed to include only true Christians, it follows, of course, that credible evidence of being a Christian, including belief of the fundamental doctrines of the Bible, should be the condition of membership.

This part of the system, also, is in accordance with divine and apostolic example. For we are informed, Acts 2: 47, "that the Lord added to the Church, daily, such as should be saved;" while Philip required of the eunuch before baptism a statement of his belief as to Christ, Acts 8: 37. The apostolic epistles addressed to the Churches are inscribed "to the saints," "to the faithful," to the "believers in Christ," with other similar epithets; and they were required to exclude those who lived in sin, or who denied the faith; 1 Cor. 5: 11—13; 2 Thess. 3: 6, 14; 1 Tim. 1: 19, 20; 6: 3—5; Titus 3: 10; 2 Pet. 2: 1—3; thus showing that the Churches were to be made up of true Christians.

V. Relation of Churches to Each Other.—Congregationalism is distinguished from simple Independency and Separatism by holding as a cardinal principle the Communion of Churches. This is not merely the principle of comity by which a member of one Church is admitted to occasional communion in another, for such comity exists among Churches most diverse from each other in their forms of government. It is the principle of mutual helpfulness and mutual responsibility among Churches which find in the Scripture the same platform of ecclesiastical order. Such Churches, though equal in authority, and mutually independent, are nevertheless bound to consult with each other for the common interest, to seek and give advice on occasions in which the action of one Church is important to the welfare of neighbor Churches, to give account to each other of any proceeding or neglect which seems contrary to the order and purity of the Gospel, and to give or receive admonition in the spirit of meekness, when admonition seems to be required.

VI. General Ecclesiastical Bodies.—Although the Scriptures give to no men, or set of men, power over the Churches, yet the Churches, or their pastors, or both, may associate together for practical religious purposes, which seem desirable, but which do not conflict with their independence.

Associations are composed either of ministers exclusively, or of Pastors and delegates from the churches. They meet for prayer and mutual counsel; they examine and approbate persons who desire to enter the ministry; and they offer suggestions to the Churches, without trenching upon their rights.

The General Association or Conference of each State is usually composed of delegates from the smaller Associations, although sometimes it is constituted of pastors and delegates directly representing the churches. This body meets annually; hears reports on the state of religion; and offers advice to the Churches on matters connected with the concerns of benevolence, sound doctrine, and religious duty. It is to be particularly noted, that these bodies possess no ecclesiastical power, like the superior judicatories of the Romish Church, and of some Protestant denominations.

VII. Ecclesiastical Councils.—When matters of peculiar importance or difficulty come before a Church, it avails itself of the advice of other Churches. Thus, when a Pastor is to be ordained or installed, the Church sends to a number of the neighboring Churches an invitation, called a "letter missive," to be present at a certain time, by their Pastors and delegates, to form an ecclesiastical Council, to examine the proposed Pastor, and to act in behalf of the Church in the public solemnity of ordination or installation, if they see no valid objection. And so, when a Pastor is dismissed, the Church calls a Council to advise and act for it in the emergency.

If a member who has been disciplined thinks that injustice has been done, and particularly if the vote of the Church was divided, it is usual to call a mutual Council, chosen half by each party, to give their opinion or advice to the Church. If the Church should not concur in the result, a copy of the opinion of the Council may be used as a letter of recommendation for the aggrieved person with which to apply to another Church. If the Church refuse to unite with the complainant in calling a mutual Council, he may summon an ex parte Council; and if that Council justify him, he may use their result as a letter of recommendation.

No Council can act on any matter not mentioned in the letter missive, or remain in existence after adjournment at the close of that business.

VIII. Of the Name Congregationalism.—The term Congregational expresses the fact that all ecclesiastical power resides in the congregated body or members of the Church; that is, in the congregation or brotherhood, and not in the officers.

IX. Differences from Other Denominations.—Congregationalists differ from Presbyterians principally in Church government. Presbyterian Churches have each a body of lay elders, who with the Pastor compose the "Session," by whom the government of the Church is exercised; members being received or excluded by their vote alone. Over the Session is the Presbytery, composed of the Pastors of the Churches in a certain district, and an elder from each Church, appointed by the Session. The Presbytery has power to control the Sessions and reverse their proceedings, and no Pastor can be called and settled without its permission. Over the Presbytery is the Synod, composed of several Presbyteries; and above the Synod is the General Assembly, formed by delegates from all the Presbyteries in the land. These delegates are appointed by the Presbyteries, and are always ministers or elders. A case of discipline may be carried up successively through all the judicatories to the General Assembly. The people have no voice in the system, except when the elder is first elected.

Congregationalists differ from Baptists with regard to baptism and church communion. Baptists hold that immersion alone is baptism, that none but adult believers should be baptized, and that none but immersed professors should be admitted to the Lord's table; while Congregationalists admit the validity of any baptism in which water is applied to the person in the name of the Trinity, believe that baptism should also be given to the infant children of believers, and welcome to the Lord's table all evangelical Christians.

Congregationalists differ also from Methodists in church government; the latter governing their Churches by bishops and conferences, who legislate for the whole body, and appoint and remove the ministers.

Congregationalists differ from Episcopalians in ceremonies of worship, and in church government. The Episcopalians hold to three orders in the ministry, and confide the admission and exclusion of members to the Pastor and the diocesan Bishop, who is set over the Churches and Ministers of a particular district, and alone has power to confirm members and ordain Ministers. Among Congregationalists every Pastor is a Bishop, as among the New Testament Churches; and all Ministers are equal in office.

X. Intercourse with other Denominations.—Congregationalism, desiring to be free from any narrow sectarianism, insists upon no denominational peculiarities as the condition of fellowship. This principle is carried out in intercourse with other denominations. At their seasons of communion, Congregational Churches invite all church-members, who are in regular standing in any evangelical denomination, and who are honoring their profession by a godly life, to sit down with them at the table of the Lord. If any of their members wish to unite with Churches of other evangelical denominations, letters are given to such Churches; or if any come from such denominations, and there is no evidence against their Christian character, they are received as from sister Churches.

The principles of the Congregational polity are thus seen to be accordant with the Scriptures, and with the practice of the first and apostolic age of Christianity.

CONFESSION OF FAITH

OF THE

BROADWAY TABERNACLE CHURCH.

As a Church of Jesus Christ associated in accordance with the teachings of the New Testament, for the public worship of God, for the observance of Gospel Sacraments and Ordinances, for mutual edification and encouragement in the Christian life, and for the advancement of the Redeemer's kingdom, we declare our union in faith and love with all who love our Lord Jesus Christ.

Receiving the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments as the Word of God and the only infallible rule of religious faith and practice, we confess our faith in the one living and true God, revealed as the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost; the Creator and Preserver of all things, whose purposes and providence extend to all events, and who exercises a righteous government over all His creatures.

We believe in the universal sinfulness and ruin of our race, since "by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned."

We believe that the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God, having taken upon himself our nature, has by his obedience, sufferings, and death, provided a way of salvation for all mankind; and that through faith in His name, whosoever will, may be saved.

We believe that although salvation is offered freely to all, they only repent and believe in Christ, who, in thus obeying the Gospel are regenerated by the Holy Spirit; and that all who are thus regenerated are "kept by the power of God, through faith, unto salvation."

We believe that there is a Day appointed in which God will raise the dead, and judge the world; that the wicked shall "go away into everlasting punishment, and the righteous into life eternal."

COVENANT ON THE PART OF PERSONS RECEIVED INTO THE CHURCH UPON CONFESSION OF THEIR FAITH.

Accepting this as the faith of this Church, you who now present yourself to be received into its fellowship, do by this act avow your personal sense of the love of God in the forgiveness of your sins; and trusting that He who hears and answers prayer, will uphold and strengthen you, you do give yourself to the Lord Jesus Christ to be His disciple, receiving Him as your only Priest and Propitiation, your great Teacher, Lawgiver and King; you dedicate yourself to God as the object of your highest love, and to His service as your highest joy; engaging to walk with us in the due observance of Christian ordinances, and that, by the aid of the Divine Spirit, you will honor your profession by a consistent Christian life.

In this solemn consecration, you confess your belief in God the Father Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth; And in Jesus Christ his only Son our Lord; Who was conceived by the Holy Ghost, Born of the Virgin Mary; Suffered under Pontius Pilate, Was crucified, dead and buried: The third day he rose from the dead; He ascended into heaven, And sitteth at the right hand of God the Father Almighty; From thence he shall come to judge the quick and the dead.

You believe in the Holy Ghost; the Holy Catholic Church, the Communion of Saints; the Forgiveness of sins; the Resurrection of the body; and the Life everlasting.

[Here Baptism will be administered to any who have not before received it.]

RESPONSIVE COVENANT OF THE CHURCH.

In view of these your professions and engagements, we affectionately receive you to the communion of this Church, and welcome you to this fellowship with us in the blessings of the Gospel, and in the service of our Divine Redeemer. May you walk worthy of Him, and of your profession! May the Lord guide and preserve you till death; and at last receive you and us to that blessed world where our love and joy shall be forever perfect! Amen.

ARTICLES

CHURCH AND SOCIETY.

Soon after the organization of the Society, Oct. 2e, 1840, as a religious corporation, the following Articles were adopted by both the Church and Society, as the basis of union and co-operation:

I. The Congregation shall hold the property, and receive the income, and make all pecuniary engagements, appropriations and payments.

II. In calling a Pastor, the Congregation and Church will act as concorrent bodies—a majority of each being necessary to constitute a call; the Church nominating, and the Congregation confirming or rejecting the nomination,

III. The Committee of the Church will provide for the supply of the pulpit when there is no settled Pastor; make the necessary arrangements for singing, and, in general, for the orderly celebration of religious worship; and the Congregation will liquidate all reasonable expenses thereby incurred. Provided, That if the Congregation choose to do so, they shall always have the right to make the committee a joint committee, by putting on it as many members of the Congregation as have been elected from the Church.

PERMANENT RULES OF THE CHURCH,

ADOPTED AT THE ADJOURNED ANNUAL MEETING IN DEC., 1865.

1. The permanent officers of this Church shall be a Pastor, or Pastors and Deacons. There shall also be elected annually, a Clerk, a Treasurer, and four brethren who, with the permanent officers, shall constitute a Committee for the general oversight of the interests of the Church. This Committee shall provide for the supply of the pulpit in cases of emergency; they shall designate the objects of benevolence to be brought before the Church for its contributions; they shall confer with persons who offer themselves for admission, and report to the Church the names of all whom they deem suitable candidates. They may also transfer the regular prayer-meeting to another evening of the same week.

2. All officers of the Church shall be elected by ballot, and without any public nomination, unless a committee shall be appointed for that purpose. When a vacancy occurs in any office, the Clerk shall notify the Church of the same at the first business meeting thereafter; and the Church shall designate a time for filling such vacancy, of which notice shall be given on the Sabbath proceeding.

3. The Church shall meet for prayer and conference on Tuesday evening of each week; except that the first Monday evening of each month shall be substituted for Tuesday evening. The Lord's Supper will be administered on the first Sabbaths of January, March, May, July, September and November, and the prayer meetings next preceding these Sabbaths, shall be also business-meetings; at which any matter relating to the interests of the Church may be introduced; and the meeting preceding the first Sabbath in March shall be the Annual Meeting; at which the Committee and the Treasurers of the Church and of the Deacon's fund, shall present their reports, and the officers for the ensuing year shall be elected. Upon the requisition of ten brethren, in writing, the Clerk shall call a special meeting for business, by causing a notice to be read from the pulpit on the Sabbath preceding such meeting. No business shall be transacted at any meeting other than the business meetings herein provided, except the consideration of requests to participate in ecclesiastical councils, and applications for contributions at the time for special objects of benevolence; which requests and contributions shall be in order in any meeting.

4. Candidates for membership shall be reported to the Church at least two weeks, before a regular business meeting. No person shall be admitted to membership except by the election of the Church, at such meeting; and those who have not already made a public profession of their faith shall make such profession in order to complete their admission.

5. Requests for letters of dismission may be announced at any of the stated services of the Church; and if at the end of one week, no objection has been made to the Clerk, he shall issue to the applicant the customary certificate, which shall be valid only one year from its date, at which time his or her relation to this Church shall terminate, unless such certificate shall have been returned to the Clerk.

6. It shall be the duty of the Committee to report to the Church, from time to time, the names of those members who have removed from the city without requesting letters of dismission, and of those who are habitually absent from Sabbath services and the communion table of the Church, for such action as may be deemed proper in the premises; it being understood that this rule does not supersede the responsibility of individuals to labor personally to recover such as may fall into error or sin, and, if need be, to bring their cases to the knowledge of the Church.

7. All questions shall be determined by a majority of the male members present on the occasion; with this exception—that the articles of faith, covenant, form of admission, or permanent rules shall not be altered but by a vote of two-thirds at an Annual Meeting; notice of the intention to propose alterations, and a statement of the substance of such alterations, having been submitted at a previous business meeting.

PRINCIPLES OF DISCIPLINE.

The following principles of Discipline, embraced in the report of a special Committee, were adopted by the Church, June 29th, 1852. They have since been incorporated by the Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, in their manual; and copied into the manuals of many other Congregational Churches:—

The subject of Church Discipline, like that of Church polity, is left in the New Testament to the guidance of general principles rather than specific precepts. One invariable rule is given for the settlement of private difficulties and the censure of private offenses; one conspicuous example is recorded of the method of dealing with an open and scandalous offense against a church; there are also occasional instructions upon the proper subjects of church censure and the mode of treating an offender; but no formal process of Church Discipline is anywhere laid down in the New Testament: that is left rather to the judgment and experience of individual churches. Your committee have therefore sought to embody the principles of the New Testament upon the subject, in a series of recommendations, and to digest a plan of discipline suited to the circumstances of this particular Church.

The directions given by Christ in Matthew xviii. 15—18, should be implicitly followed in all cases of private and personal offense. The Church should never in any form entertain a complaint, or suffer an insinuation from one member against another, in a matter of private grievance, until these instructions have been complied with in good faith and without effect. Even where the letter of these instructions has been followed, regard should be had to the question whether they have been complied with in spirit or only in form. The Church should never allow a private grievance to be spread before them without satisfactory evidence that the aggrieved party has used all reasonable endeavors to gain redress in private, in the spirit of forgiveness, of forbearance, and of brotherly love. When one member of the Church suffers himself to be alienated from another, or from the communion of the Church, because of a private difficulty, while yet he does not in a proper spirit seek to reconcile the matter in private, any member of the Church cognizant of the facts should labor with him to persuade him to his duty.

Your Committee are of opinion that the rule of proceeding laid down in Matthew xviii. is obligatory as a rule only in cases or private offense. That rule was given prior to the organization of local churches; it was given to the disciples as individuals—associated, indeed, in one brotherhood, but not incorporated as a local church, under a covenant and laws. It was a rule of practical wisdom for the settlement of personal differences; a rule equally appropriate out of the church and in it; a rule for kindly intercourse between man and man. If thy brother shall trespass against thee, i. e., according to the precise import of the original, if he shall do thee a wrong—if he shall injure thee in thy person, in thy property, in thy reputation, in any of thy personal interests and relations, if he shall give thee offense, or do thee any injury whatever, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone,—endeavor to settle it in private; if he shall hear thee thou hast gained thy brother. But if he will not hear thee, then—still for the purpose of a reconciliation, and with as little publicity as possible—take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established. And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it to the church—the whole company, circle, or brotherhood with which you are associated, and towards which you sustain relations in common. But if he neglect to hear the church—if he will not regard the whole society of believers—let him be to thee as a heathen and a publican.

A breach of church covenant, or any public and scandalous offense against religion, is not a personal wrong done to any particular member of the church, or to the members of the church as individuals, in any such sense as would bring it within the scope of the instructions of Christ for the healing of private offenses. But while in the judgment of your Committee, the rule given in Matthew xviii. is not in such case obligatory as a rule, it is nevertheless desirable that the principle and the spirit of the instructions there given should be applied also to offenses of a public nature, wherever this is practicable. Indeed, the Committee deem it of the utmost importance that every member of the church should feel it to be his personal duty to admonish in private an erring brother, and to seek to restore him to the path from which he has wandered. This is one of the most impressive obligations of that mutual covenant into which church members enter with one another. No member of the church has a right to pass over without notice the dereliction of a fellow-member from Christian duty, on the plea that the offense is not personal against himself. The knowledge of the transgression imposes upon him an obligation to seek immediately the restoration of the erring member, and the purification of the church from his offense. To omit this is to be guilty of a breach of covenant and an offense against the purity of the church; it is in a measure to connive at sin. How can that church member be faithful to his own covenant with the church, who knows that a fellow-member of the church is living in the habitual violation of that covenant, in the belief of some deadly error, or in the allowance of some known sin, and yet takes no steps to recover the transgressor or to deliver the church from the scandal that he is bringing upon it? The discipline of the church belongs not to the Pastor, or to the Deacons, or to the Church Committee; it is a matter of personal duty and responsibility with every member of the Church.

In all large churches, and especially in all city churches, where membership is perpetually changing, it comes to pass, in the course of years, that there are numerous absentees enrolled upon the list of members, whose very names are hardly known to the active members of the church, and of whose character and position nothing is known to the body of present communicants. The case of such persons cannot be left to the ordinary course; if there is anything in them worthy of discipline, it is not likely to be ascertained by any individual inquiry. Your Committee would therefore recommend that the church from time to time appoint Committees of Inquiry upon the cases of absentees, or of members who, though residing in our vicinity, are supposed to be living in the neglect of covenant obligations. The way for such inquiries has been opened by the recent adoption of the standing rules respecting absentees; but these inquiries should not be devolved exclusively upon the Church Committee, and much less upon the Clerk of the Church, who is already overburdened with the duties of his office. But the appointment of such a committee of inquiry respecting an absentee or a supposed delinquent, should in no case be regarded as the commencement of a process of discipline, or even preparatory to such a process; and it should not give license to the utterance of any charges or insinuations touching the character of the person concerning whom the inquiry is proposed. If even in a criminal court an accused person is presumed to be innocent until adjudged to be guilty, certainly a church meeting should hold itself aloof from canvassing the character of an absent member, who is not even upon trial. The sole object of the Committee of Inquiry should be to procure information respecting the residence and the church communion of absent members, and not to gather up materials for accusation against them, as if they were already arraigned. If in the course of their investigations they find matters worthy of discipline, they should act precisely as it is proper for church members to act in any case where facts requiring the discipline of the church are brought to their knowledge.

In cases of public and scandalous offense, the church may proceed in a more summary manner upon common fame. The authority for this is given in the instructions of Paul to the church at Corinth. It is reported commonly that there is fornication among you: the common fame of this scandal in the church had reached the Apostle at Philippi; immediately on hearing of it, he rebuked the church for their neglect and connivance in the matter, and required them on their first coming together to cut off the offender from their fellowship without delay. Here is a precedent for proceeding at once, and in a public manner, to discipline a church member, whose offense is an open scandal before the world. Obviously every such case should be brought to the adjudication of the church. A flagrant case of immorality, such as intemperance, fraud, or licentiousness in a church member, dishonors the church and the cause of Christ, as this is represented in and by the church. In such a case it is not enough that one or more individuals, who have had special oversight of the case, are satisfied of the repentance of the offender; the church should also be satisfied, and an open offender should in no case be restored to his full standing in the church, without making to the church a confession of his sin, and giving satisfactory evidence of repentance.

As a matter of propriety during a process of discipline, the party arraigned should be understood to be suspended from church privileges.

The standard Congregational treatises on church discipline, make a distinction between the withdrawing of fellowship and excommunication; the former being sometimes called "the lesser excommunication," and applied to cases of breach of covenant, or the transgression of mere church ordinances, and the latter to breaches of the moral law. Your Committee, however, can hardly find a warrant for such a distinction in terms, either in the Scriptures or in the nature of the case. The act in both cases is substantially the same; the individual is cut off from the communion of the Church, and can never again be received into it, except upon a new confession of faith. If the term excommunication could be dissociated from all superstitious horrors, and from all idea of civil penalty, it might be retained with advantage, as best corresponding with the facts in the case. Your Committee would recommend the use of this term, or it equivalent, in all cases where discipline proceeds to the excision of the offender, care being taken in each instance to specify the cause of excision, that those who are cut off for mere offenses against church order, may not lie under the imputation of immorality. In all cases of open and scandalous offense, or of any breach of morality, or any fundamental error in doctrine affecting Christian character, when efforts to bring the offender to repentance prove unavailing, the church should proceed to the act of excommunication or excisi n, giving the reasons for the same, which should be publicly announced before the congregation on the Lord's day.

But in cases of breach of covenant, the church should deal very patiently and leniently with the erring member, discharging faithfully its own covenant obligations towards him, which may hitherto have been neglected, seeking in every way to lead him or her to repentance; and if after a reasonable delay, all efforts seems unavailing, the Church shall disown this member, giving in full the reasons for its action, which shall also be stated to the assembled church at the next following communion season.

LETTERS OF DISMISSION.

It is the duty of members removing, and fixing their residence where they cannot customarily meet with the Church in its religious services, to apply for letters of dismission to some church in the community where their residence is to be. It is the obvious duty of a person taking such a letter to use it, and unite with such church without delay. And although one who takes a letter is in the interim deemed still a member of this Church, yet if he suffers a year to pass without using the letter or returning it, he ceases to be a member at the expiration of the year, and the validity of the letter as a recommendation to other churches terminates. The following extract from the report of the Committee on Permanent Rules, made at the annual meeting in March, 1860, states the principles recognized by this Church on this subject:—

"In the New Testament history it appears that locality was an important, if not an essential, idea in the constitution of a church. A church was a local body of believers in Christ, associated and habitually convening for the worship of God; it was the company of believers in one place, joined together in a common faith and worship. A church ought properly to consist only of those who can and do habitually meet together in the same place for the maintenance of Christian worship, and the enjoyment of Christian communion. When, therefore, a member of a church cannot, by reason of distance, any longer meet with the body, it is proper that he should take a dismission from that to some other church, with which he can meet regularly for Christian worship and ordinances. It has been customary to regard a person thus dismissed, as still a member of the church from which he takes his letter, until he has been regularly received into the fellowship of another church.

"This custom originated at a time when the neighborhood of communities, and the consequent fellowship of churches was much closer than now. In the early days of New England, permanent residence was the rule, and removal the exception; and a church member who removed could be followed, without difficulty, into the neighboring town or county, which was likely to be the limit of his travels. Now, removal and temporary sojourning is the order of the day, and permanent residence the marked exception; and besides, removals are likely to be made to such a distance that a church necessarily loses sight of its dismissed members. Rules and usages, therefore, which sprang up in a different state of society, are not the infallible law for our times and circumstances. A church should not be permanently responsible for dismissed members, over whom it cannot exercise its watch and care."

CONDITIONS OF MEMBERSHIP

AND

RULES RESPECTING ELECTIONS

IN THE

BROADWAY TABERNACLE CHURCH.

PROVISIONS OF STATUTE.

The annual meeting of the "Broadway Tabernacle Society," for the election of Trustees, and other business, is held on the second Tuesday succeeding the first Monday in November. The terms of office of the Trustees expire on the first day of December.

The statute of this State, in reference to religious corporations (1 Rev. Stat. 4th ed., 1183), prescribe the following rules in respect to elections:

1. The trustees of any religious society, or a majority of them, shall, at least one month before the expiration of office of any of the trustees, notify the same in writing to the minister, (or, in case of his death or absence, to the deacons), specifying the names of the trustees whose terms of office will expire; and the minister (or, in case of his death or absence one of the deacons) shall publicly notify the members of the society of such vacancies, and appoint the time and place for the election of new trustees to fill up the same. This notification shall be given at least fifteen days before the election, and for two successive Sabbaths or days on which the society shall statedly meet for public worship. The election shall be held at least six days before the vacancies shall occur.

II. Two deacons (or, if there be none present, then two members of the society) to be nominated by a majority of the members present, shall preside at the elections, receive the votes of the electors, be the judges of the qualifications of such electors, and the officers to return the names of the persons who, by plurality of voices, shall be elected to serve as trustees.

III. Every male person of lawful age shall be entitled to vote, who shall have been a stated attendant on divine worship in the congregation for at least one year previous to the election, and who shall have contributed to the support of the society according to the usages and customs thereof.

IV. It shall be the duty of the clerk or secretary of the board of Trustees to keep a register of the names of all such persons as shall desire to become stated hearers in the congregation, and, therein to note the time when such request was made, and to attend each election, in order to test the qualification of electors in case the same shall be questioned.

V. The inspectors of elections must immediately thereafter certify, under their hands and seals, the names of the persons elected to serve as trustees, specifying that they were elected to serve as Trustees (of the Broadway Tabernacle Society), which certificate the statute requires to be acknowledged or proved, and recorded.

RULES OF THE SOCIETY, IN RELATION TO ELECTIONS.

Adopted at an Adjourned Meeting in January, 1860.

I. The inspectors of election, at each election, shall preside in front of the audience, with a box for the reception of ballots.

II. The payment of pew-rent shall be considered the only mode of contributing to the support of this Society.

III. Every male person who hires from the Trustees a pew, or one or more sittings, shall be deemed to have thereby requested that his name be registered as a member of the Society, and the Clerk is hereby directed to enter such names upon his register accordingly.

IV. No person shall be allowed to vote, by ballot or otherwise, at any meeting of this Society who does not possess the statute qualifications for an elector.

RULES OF ORDER

BUSINESS MEETINGS.

THE CONDUCT OF BUSINESS MEETINGS.

Officers.—At the appointed time for the meeting, the Clerk, or if the Clerk is absent, any member, may call the Church to order, and put the question upon the choice of a moderator.

When the Moderator chosen has taken the chair, if the Clerk is absent, a Clerk pro tem. should be chosen.

Speaking.—When a member desires to be heard, he should rise in his place and address himself to the presiding officer by his title, Moderator, and should then pause for a moment until the Moderator announces his name, or otherwise designates him.

Motions.—Every motion must be made in writing, if required by any member; and, when seconded, must be read or clearly stated by the Moderator, and submitted to the consideration of the Church. A motion made and seconded, must be disposed of before any other business is in order; and meanwhile all other motions, are out of order, except such as dispose of a principal question, as a motion to amend, or commit, or for the previous question; and such as arise out of or are incidental to the principal motion, as questions relating to order, motions for leave to withdraw a motion, &c.; and motions incidental to business, as motions to adjourn, &c.

An amendment may go to the exclusion, addition, or substitution of words or sentences; indeed, a motion to amend by striking out all the words after the word resolved, and substituting an entirely new proposition upon the same subject, is in order. But where a resolution is in sections, the amendments must be in the order of the sections, beginning with the first section; and therefore, if an amendment is made to the third section of a resolution first and carried, it will be out of order to move an amendment to the first or second section. No subject different from that under consideration, can be admitted under color of an amendment.

Dividing resolutions.—Where a proposition is complicated, the presiding officer may divide the same, at the request of a member.

Withdrawing motion.—Until a motion has been stated to the meeting, by the presiding officer, the mover may withdraw or modify it, at his pleasure.

Privileged motions.—There are certain motions which may be made at any time that the mover can gain the floor: such are the motions, to refer to a committee, to lay on the table, to postpone to a future time, fixed or indefinite, and to adjourn. All these motions may be debated except the motion to postpone indefinitely and to adjourn. Motions to postpone or to commit, cannot be made a second time at the same meeting. And when a member is speaking, no motion can be made, but with his consent.

Debate.—When any motion is before the Church, every member has a right to express his views concerning it. The Moderator is bound to confine every speaker to the point under consideration, and also to protect him against all interruption, except that of being called to order if he violate the rule of courtesy, or of debate; but after the matter of order is adjusted, the speaker has a right to go on with the debate.

Order of voting.—When several amendments or propositions are before the meeting, the order in which they are to be acted upon is usually the reverse of the order in which they were made. If several sums are proposed, the largest is to be first put to vote; if several periods of time, the longest; and as to numbers generally, the largest. When a motion is put, it should be first clearly stated by the Moderator or read by the Clerk.

Effect of various motions.—An indefinite postponement defeats or suppresses the question under debate. A motion to refer to a committee postpones the subject until the committee report. A motion to lay on the table means to lay aside for the present.

The previous question is a motion that the main question under discussion be immediately acted upon. If the motion for the previous question is carried in the affirmative, the question under discussion must be put without change of form, or further debate. If the motion for the previous question is lost, then the consideration of the main question under discussion is still in order. The previous question cannot be put upon an amendment, or upon any of the other merely subsidiary motions, which are used like the previous question itself for the suppression of original motions.

Voting.—There are three ways of declaring the sense of the meeting: 1. By the Moderator stating the substance of the proposition, and declaring it to be adopted if no one objects; in this case, if no one should object, the proposition is adopted by common consent. 2. By the Moderator putting the question and the members in favor of it responding aye, and afterwards those opposed responding nay; and thereupon the Moderator declares the result, but if a member thinks the Moderator in error, or that an accurate count would show a different result, he has a right to demand it immediately; in which case the question must be put again, and the voters carefully counted. 3. By ballot.

After the question is put to vote, there can be no debate, and no new proposition made, until the voting is finished.

Reconsiderations.—After the vote is taken, any member who voted in the majority, may, during the same meeting, move a reconsideration; which motion opens the subject again for debate; and if the vote to reconsider is adopted, the whole matter stands just as it did before the reconsidered vote was taken.

Committees.—It is the duty of the Moderator to appoint committees, unless the meeting do so by its own action. The mover of a resolution, by virtue of which a committee is to be appointed, is entitled, by courtesy, to be appointed chairman of such committee. The person first named in the enumeration of the persons appointed on a committee, is to be deemed chairman of such committee; but the committee itself may elect another chairman.

Reports of Committees.—When the report of a committee is presented, motions should be made either to accept, or to accept and adopt, or to amend, or to recommit the report. Upon a motion to accept the report, it will be placed on file; upon a motion to accept and adopt the report, it will become the action of the meeting.

Appeals.—All the decisions of the presiding officer are subject to revision by the Church.

Adjourned meetings are deemed a continuance of the original meeting.
